SUMMER MISSION TRIP!!

June 27 - July 2nd

Finish The Race

Many of us have seen videos or images, like the one above, of olympic track athletes seemingly failing to finish the race due to exhaustion or injury. The racer above, Derek Redmond, was a 400 meter dash olympian who tore his hamstring during a semifinal race at the 1992 Summer Olympics. With pain shooting through his leg as he hopped to the finish line, his father raced past security and onto the track where he wrapped his arms around his son and led him across the finish line. It was an emotional moment that showed the pure love of a father for his son. As I was sitting in line for confession yesterday... this image popped into my head.

There's been many sins in my life where it seems like I just can't quite cross the finish line. I can see how far I've come over the past few years but it seems like just when the finish line is in sight I, like Derek Redmond, tear my hamstring and the task of finishing seems impossible. The pain unbearable. Guilt creeps in. Doubt too. But yesterday morning while waiting for confession I felt my Father's arms wrap around me and begin leading me to the finish line. Instead of feeling stuck in the pain and guilt I felt the loving embrace of the Father. A Father who picked me up, wrapped His arms around me, leaned His head against mine and said "finish the race."

No matter how long the race may be, whether a marathon or a sprint, you will get there. Regardless of how much we've trained or how hard we try sometimes we fall. But when we do, look up and find your Father... because He will be racing past the security to pick you up and lead you across the finish line.
